

After only one month in the air, Tiara Air has cause to celebrate!

It may only be a one-month celebration, but the Director of Tiara Air, Alejandro Muyale, and the Commercial Manager, his uncle, Camilo Muyale had smiles on their faces during a press conference on Friday afternoon. They announced that the brand new airline is breaking even after only one month, something that would be a cause of celebration for any business. The demand for their service has been so great that they also took the opportunity to announce that Tiara Air is expanding its schedule, and is already in negotiations to upgrade their fleet to jets that will seat 150 plus passengers.

Tiara air had been flying with chartered planes previously to a month ago, when they flew with their own equipment, two Sharp 360 turbo prop planes. The airline has been running round trip flights on a varied schedule between Aruba and Curaçao . As of June 1, they will increase the Monday through Friday schedule to three flights a day and there will be changes in the flight times. The the 7:30 AM flight will now depart at 7:00 A.M and the 5:00 pm flight will change to 5:45, these flights return from Curaçao one hour after their Aruba departure. In addition, there will be a mid-day flight at 1:30 PM, which will return from Curaçao one hour later. The present Sunday morning and evening flights to Curaçao will discontinue in favor of the single mid-day departure.

In addition, as of June 1 Tiara Air will be flying to Punto Fijo Venezuela, and Bonaire. Punto Fijo flights will depart twice daily, at 9:30 A.M. and at 5:00 P.M., return flights from Punto Fijo will depart at 10:15 A.M. and 5:30 P.M respectively.

Bonaire Flights will be offered twice a week departing round trip on Fridays and Sundays. This flexible schedule will offer passengers the choice of taking a relaxing weekend away on the charming island, or a longer getaway if they prefer. Flights will depart at 7:45 P.M. and return to Aruba from Bonaire at 9:00 P.M. Tiara Air also has its own frequent flyer program, and regular customers, after purchasing ten trips with the airline will get the eleventh passage for free.

From the immediate success of Tiara's Air's schedule it is obvious that these regular connections between the three sister islands of Aruba, Bonaire and Curaçao are not a luxury but a necessity for business and other activities. Tiara Air is a welcome addition to the Aruba's transportation providers, and their continued success in the service they offer is of vital importance to residents of all three islands. Congratulations to Tiara Air!
